

This may indicate a rupture of the collateral ligament, a bruise or other local injury. There may also be swelling around the crow's feet, Baker's cyst,. There may be a fracture of the navicular bone if an injury was received during sports or a fall on the leg. With sprains and other similar injuries that are not accompanied by injuries, swelling, pain, hemorrhage (bruising), and loss of mobility occur within a few days. With a tendon rupture, the symptoms are more pronounced, since this type of ligament is very strong and can rupture at the point of attachment to the bone or elsewhere. Symptoms are the same as sprains.
