Another approach is to record the conversation in a similar way to how the audio would be recorded on a broadcast radio station. This can be a problem as broadcasters may be nervous about giving the complete message out to the audience. The caller knew exactly what was going to be coming. "I'm going to talk about the seven items I had on my calendar. The other person knows in advance what is coming but is not sure what the caller is talking about. This is where the gating process may not be necessary. This type of phone call normally goes better and is considered more professional. With gating, the 'gatekeeper' can block the caller from continuing to speak. The gatekeeper raises their voice during the gating process. This is normally at the beginning of the phone call. At this stage, the caller is making small talk in a friendly manner. He has made up his mind to call and is ready 3da54e8ca3
