Q: Will my iPhone 4S save the original stock configuration after upgrading to iOS 5? I just bought my first iPhone 4S and i'm going to upgrade to the latest firmware using iTunes. My question is: how to make sure the settings, themes, etc are stored in the phone after my upgrade? As much I read there is no option or setting for that and that I'll need to re-set the phone to the original settings. Can it be done or not? Do I lose data from my iPhone 4S? Thanks!

A: In iOS 5, the only differences you will see are a few minor UI changes. The OS itself will be the same between the two versions. Everything else is fully configurable through settings stored on your device. [The role of the physician in supporting tobacco cessation]. Tobacco use is a global public health problem. Use of tobacco results in social and individual health and economic costs. Among the many risks of tobacco use, cardiovascular diseases are the most common. Thus, the role of the physician in tobacco cessation has become more important. Physicians not only can provide tobacco cessation information for patients with smoking and quitting the habit, but also can perform an effective consultation with their patients. Physicians should firstly identify patients who are likely to quit smoking and recommend an effective counseling strategies. After that, physicians should give appropriate advice according to each patient's level of understanding of the dangers of tobacco smoking. If they are unable to perform or do not feel confident doing it, physicians can employ a tobacco cessation program that has been proven effective. After giving all the possible treatment options, physicians can develop personalized and integrated health-care plans with their patients. Some of the social workers and psychiatric nurses can help patients quit smoking. When patients feel depressed, a positive attitude and a nonjudgmental approach are especially useful. The SWATH (sequential window acquisition of all theoretical fragment-ion spectra) technique, which involves high-resolution accurate-mass measurements, is well-suited to the identification of unknown compounds. In the past, we have used this technique to identify endogenous metabolites with the well-established tandem mass spectrometric ion trap technology and demonstrated its superior discriminatory ability in separating overlapping ions. However, the added analytical costs of a mass spectrometer, a dedicated automated pre-processing, and a trained investigator have so far prevented widespread application of SWATH to large populations of patients and controls. In this proposal, we

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a lens having a sharp optical performance, light weight and high rigidity, and a lens array such as a camera module in which a plurality of such lenses are integrated. In particular, the present invention relates to an optical structure of a metal-coated plastic lens with a recessed surface. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, a plastic lens is widely used in a digital camera, a video camera and the like in view of light weight, cost, moldability and the like. In general, an optical performance of a plastic lens greatly depends on a material. For example, a lens made of a low thermal expansion glass and a lens made of a hard polycarbonate resin have been developed. A plastic lens made of a high-performance optical material with a low refractive index, such as a polysilicon and a fluorite, is also developed. In recent years, as an optical material having a higher refractive index, a plastic lens made of a clear high-refractive-index glass such as an optical glass and a synthetic resin optical material obtained by mixing a glass containing a specific metal element, such as a titanium-based metal with a synthetic resin has been attracting attention (e.g. Japanese Patent Laid-Open Publication Nos. 2009-260289 and 2009-260290). The metal-containing plastic lens disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open Publication Nos. 2009-260289 and 2009-260290 are suitable for a digital camera or a video camera because the metal-containing plastic lens has high transmittance and is excellent in a hardening property at a time of molding. However, since a lens surface layer is formed of a transparent synthetic resin, the lens surface has a recessed surface. Thus, the lens surface is not smooth, and thus, a point defect and an image defect may occur depending on an object. The optical lens disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open Publication No. 2009-260289 and 2009-260290 was improved in a point defect and an image defect in comparison with a plastic lens made of an optical glass or a synthetic resin obtained by a secondary processing of a natural optical glass. However, the lens is not sufficient in an optical performance with respect to a reflection of an object. That is, there is a problem that a chromatic aberration increases in a case where a lens surface is formed of a transparent resin due to the refractive index disp
