Features Key:

Heroes & Raids: Eligible for one to eight heroes, the Elden Ring boasts a large scale campaign.
Side Stories & Missions: Local stories will play out, removing the boundaries between events and seamlessly linking ongoing battles.
Digital Item Exchange: Players can freely exchange the resources and items they find. Items can be personal weapons, armor, or accessories.
Asynchronous Online Battles: The presence of other players allows you to share the same battle map with players of various regions. Networking features will be upgraded with additional functions in the future.
Customization: Add decorative materials with your own elements and create a wholly different character.
A Choice of Jobs: By combining the elements that provide different kinds of weapons, you can change your job. You can also create a character from scratch and invent a new job.
Progress Control: The epic drama is divided into chapters. You can check your progress in the order of the chapters, carefully, in-game.

Long-term durable visual outcomes in eyes with diffuse diabetic macular edema after intravitreal dexamethasone implant. To evaluate the long-term effectiveness and safety of a dexamethasone intravitreal implant (OZURDEX) in eyes with diffuse diabetic macular edema (DME) 6 months after treatment. Prospective, noninterventional, open-label, multicenter study of 6-month outcomes in eyes with diffuse DME. All enrolled eyes received 0.7 mg OZURDEX. The primary efficacy end point was mean change in best-corrected visual acuity (BCVA). Additional efficacy end points included change in BCVA (macular and peripheral), best-corrected intraocular pressure, fundus photographs, optical coherence tomography, and optical scatter (comet) profiles. Safety was evaluated by monitoring adverse events, including endophthalmitis and retinal detachment. Of the 118 eyes originally enrolled, 95.1% (n = 113) completed 6 months of follow-up. Baseline mean (+/-SD) central subfield thickness (CST) was 431 +/- 88.3 mic

Canada's Council of Ministers says it's about to sign off on a political deal that should see the country stop trying to build a pipeline to carry Alberta oil to the Pacific Northwest. But in Washington, senior Republicans say there are now questions about whether the promised change in direction has actually occurred. Related: Canada to end efforts to build Pacific pipeline "My sense is the government has been quite insistent that they're not going to be pursuing that for the next little while, whether that's post the election or longer than that," said Oklahoma Sen. Jim Inhofe, the top Republican on the Environment and Public Works Committee. "So I'm just wondering when that's going to be exactly and how that's going to impact the future of projects like Keystone." Keystone XL — which would carry Alberta's vast oil reserves to the refineries of the American Midwest — was one of President Obama's major initiatives when he took office in 2009. It hit a snag in 2015 when Nebraska officials rejected an application by TransCanada Corp. to build the pipeline. The Canadian government stepped in, promising to pursue the project only under certain conditions. The conditions included
