Forward Sven Baertschi was not in the lineup. "Tobias was feeling better," Baertschi said. "He was training today. I guess he was close." Edler was cleared to play last week but didn't travel to Calgary, where he was diagnosed with an inflamed appendix. He was in Vancouver, where he was to start pre-season training, the night he was diagnosed. Edler has been training but hasn't been able to skate or play in a regular-season game. Edler had a lower-body injury on Oct. 22 in Vancouver and played the following game against Phoenix on Oct. 28. He played in the final four games of last season after returning from a lower-body injury, and had an assist and a minus-2 rating in 11 playoff games. Ekman-Larsson centering Arizona's defence corps is starting to gel. Erik Karlsson is starting to form a partnership with Shane Doan and Oliver Ekman-Larsson is finally showing he's the playmaker this team needed. Karlsson and Ekman-Larsson got back into a rhythm after the Arizona players spent their annual break at their golf course, and it showed when the Coyotes went toe-to-toe with the Kings in the second period of Tuesday's game. Both are big, strong, physical defencemen, with Karlsson especially adept at stealing the puck away from forwards and Ekman-Larsson a strong skater with a great stick. Ekman-Larsson's shot
